Louisville.

Louisville is farther north than Richard She is the centre of a magnificent sountry. To-day she has the sympathies of the world. We in Richmond thought the fall of the Capitolifoor an unparalleled disaster; and for a long time after it happened the recollection of it was constantly present in our thoughts. But Louisville is stated to distribute for educational purposes, but may there not be such a thing as paying too dearly for a whistle, even though it may be a good whistle, and we may be anxions to have it?

Would not the surrender of the principles upon which he Federal Government was founded, and upon which it was administered for nearly a hundred years, be to high a price to pay for the benefits, either seeming or real, offered? May not this inductive bill be the precursor of others which would strike still more fatal blows to all local governments?

Also, that the call under which the Farmers' Convention as-sembled pledged its delegates to the support of the Democratic State ticket. But evidently that pledge amounts to nothing now. The new movement has come to stay. We shall watch it with interest.

Mr. Massey is disposed to accept the de feat of the Blain bill as possibly a blessing in disguise. Mr. Massey might find in its defeat a reason for continuing to advocate the plan of devoting to negro education only the school money paid into the treasury by negroes. Mr. Massey writes to us as follows: (For the Dispatch.)

The Blair Bill.

The defeat of the "Blair bill" in the United States Senate may be a surprise to many, but is it just cause for grief? May not its defeat indicate that there is a lingering consciousness in the breasts of statesmen in all parts of the United States that the Constitution fixes some limits to Federal legislation? The Virginia senators showed proper appreciation of representative duty by voting for the bill. They could not have done otherwise after the wishes of their constituents had been so clearly expressed in party platforms and legislative resolutions. But can one be justly considered disloyal or censorious if he expresses doubt of the wisdom or statesmanship of those platform and legislative resolutions? We would like to have the amount of money the Blair bill proposed to distribute for educational purposes, but may there not be such a thing as paying blows to all local governments?

I have neither time nor inclination to discuss these questions, but submit them to your readers for such consideration as they may choose to give them.

Petersburg, Va., March 28, 1890.

A very high wind has prevailed here since an early hour this morning, and clouds of dust almost obscuring one side of the street from the other have at times been swept through the city. People at times were compelled to seek protection from the blinding showers of gravel and dust by entering the first convenient door they could find. It is not often that such storms of dust as were experienced to-day storms of dust as were experienced to-day have been witnessed in our city. The wind was evidently the spent force of the cyclone which swept over the West yesterday, and the feeling is one of gratitude that we escaped from the severity of the storm itself.

It is reported that the Swift Creek cotton-factory, in Chesterfield county, will shortly suspend work temporarily. The company, it is said, are now finishing up the work on hand and when this is completed will close down. The probability is that the cessation of work will only be temporarily. The factory is well equipped and well prepared for the manufacture of cotton cloth and will not long remain idle.

This morning detectives captured and lodged in jail in Portsmouth two of the negro gang of thieves engaged in robbing the freight trains of the Seaboard and Roanoke railroad, who gave their names as Lake Henderson and George Drewry. Va-cious packages of merchandise stolen by these parties were recovered. The authori-ties of the Seaboard road have been greatly annoyed for a long time by the depreda-tions of thieves at various points along the line, and occasionally the thieves are caught and sent to the penitentiary, but the ex-amples made do not seem to have much effect, and the thieving goes on as syste-matically as before. PRITERSBURG, March 28.—The visit abroad of Colonel Asa Rogers, of this city, at this time is regarded by some as in the interest of the reported syndicate which is to control the Norfolk and Western railroad. The real object of his visit, however, is believed to be in the interest of the Roanoke canal property, in which General Mahone and Semators Cameron and Plumb and other gentlemen are large stockholders. This is a very valuable property, the development of which would be highly profitable to the owners. Very little credence is now attached to the rumors about the change of management of the Norfolk and Western railroad, with which General Mahone's name has been so prominently mentioned. tour early next month, "as the delegates have been field so much that they have lost their appetites."

The train was stopping to take water, when the brakeman climbed to the top of a box-car and began putting down the brakes. The train started to move, approaching the bridge near the station and before he could get out of the way his head struck the bradge, killing him instantly.

According to a New York railroad-man who has a fancy for statistics the railroad managers of this country have not less than $5,000,000 of their stockholders' money invested in special cars for their own private use. This investment not only does not draw any interest, but it involves the constant sending of more good money after it. These palaces on wheels are for the sole delectation of the general officers, whether they are bent on business or pleasure. Even if these cars lasted forever they would keep a perpetual hole in the dividend accounts of the companies owning them, but, unfortunately, they have to be frequently repaired and improved at the cost of thousands and thousands of deliars annually, and magnificent rolling-stock must be renewed every ten years.
